2. Title and purpose of the project

CBS Maritime, Ph.d., International Relations, Capture or Autonomy in Decision-Making of International Organizations

An analysis of the participation of maritime commercial interests in negotiations and the decision-making process in the IMO, and the determination of which actors or elements can determine outcomes.
describe when process rather than power may determine outcomes

3. Collected data and storage of data

None of the above. Political opinions are registered, but they are not personal opinion but stances that are professionally maintained as part of each individual's profession.

I do not consider the data collected to be sensitive.

None of the above. Behavior by negotiators and their principals may be disclosed as less than moral since one object is to discover whether 'corporate capture' of the IMO takes place.

Question not answered.

Data is collected via the IMO web-site where documents are publicly available, via closed parts of the website accessible only to participants and through observation of negotiations in which the researcher participates.
Interview data is collected and will be anonymised

Data in raw form is stored on a laptop, with occasional back-up on an external drive. Data as cited and used is stored online in dropbox and ordered with Zotero

4. Categories of registered persons and type of information

- Information on the following categories of people is processed:

Names of delegates and their association with a delegation.

Where available LinkedIn information about previous and present employment

Some news articles and official websites listing information about previous and present employment of delegates

I am noting when and how long a delegation (person) speaks, and the content,
I will note any changes in position over time and which delegations may agree

5. Recipients in Denmark
